The officers and teachers of the M. E. Sunday School met at the church Tuesday night and decided to have their Christmas entertainment on Monday evening Dec. 25, 1905. Committees were appointed and other arrangements were made for appropriately celebrating the event.

A FAREWELL GATHERING

Friends of Mr. Shands and Family threw them a Surprise

The friends and neighbors of F. R. Shands and family, planned a surprise for them on Monday evening which was carried out in a very successful manner. The surprise being complete but instead of the Shands family being the surprised ones the table was turned and the neighbors were surprised as the family were all dressed in best dress and tucked waiting for the crowd to assemble. But this did not mar the pleasure of the company and all proceeded to have a good time and see that every one else enjoyed themselves.

The young folks A. L. Thomas, Geo. Cook, F. R. Shands and others of this "under age" enjoyed themselves at the ever popular game "Snap."

A sumptuous supper was served at a late hour to which all did ample justice.

That Terrible Mail Storm.

Mr. Jones formerly of the Dewey neighborhood, but now of Kendrick town, was in the city last week and was a pleasant caller at this office. Mr. Jones lives in the track of the terrible mail storm which visited that section last spring and says that he and his neighbors suffered practically the complete loss of all of this year's crops. Not only that but the young orchard on his place was completely ruined. It cost Mr. Jones $7.00 to replace the window glass broken out of his house by the hail.

Burglars

Mr. and Mrs. Myers were awakened Monday night about 11 o'clock by some one trying to get into their restaurant by the back door. They thought at first that it was a rat but on investigation a piece of iron was discovered sticking through a crack between the door and casing evidently for the purpose of turning the button which is used to fasten the door. Who ever it was evidently acquainted with the fastening, but they were scared away before their identity was discovered.

No Poison in Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

From Napier, New Zealand Herald: Two years ago the Pharmacy Board of New South Wales, Australia, had a committee made up of the "cough" remedies that were sold in that market. Out of the entire lot they found only one that they declared was entirely free from all poisons. This exception was Chamberlain's Cough Remedy made by the Chamberlain Medicine Co., Des Moines, Iowa, U. S. A. The presence of all narcotics makes this remedy the safest and best that can be had and it is with a feeling of security that any mother can give it to her little ones. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is a specially recommended by the doctors for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough. This remedy is for sale by all druggists, Nov. 4-6.

COMMERCIAL FERTILIZER.

and where great difficulty is found in making clover stick, 100 pounds of bone and 50 pounds of muriate of potash per acre will not only be very beneficial and profitable to the wheat, but will usually insure a good stand of clover. Oftentimes this difficulty can be overcome by the application of lime, and if a timothy is in the neighborhood or if it is convenient to burn lime, apply at the rate of about 50 bushels per acre and plough under, sow to wheat, and the following spring sow in clover, with the result that as a rule the clover will stick.

Corn and clover are both heavy potash feeders. Wheat, oats, timothy and bluegrass are light potash feeders, while wheat is particularly helped by the application of phosphorus. While as I said before there is no way to get phosphorus and potash without buying them, practically speaking, more or less of these ingredients have been washed down into the subsoil beyond the reach of the roots of the corn, wheat etc. By growing clover on this land a very deep rooted plant—this potash especially, and more or less of the phosphoric acid, is brought to the surface and made available for the crops that follow the clover.

Through the clover gathering nitrogen from above, potash and phosphoric acid from below, and increase the productivity of the surface soil in terms of these important ingredients of plant food.

The Shelby county farmer can well afford to buy all the phosphoric acid that his plants need, and this he can determine by actual trial, provided he will add attention to his soil in large quantities through the means already pointed out in previous articles.

We are often asked for fertilizers especially adapted to grain. The best grain fertilizer is barnyard manure spread on the surface. The next best is to feed cattle corn and cottonseed meal and let them manure the surface. When neither of these sources is available, a top dressing of 15 to 250 pounds of pure raw bone meal will be found helpful and not especially expensive. This will however, be neither as helpful nor as cheap as barnyard manure or the feeding of the cattle.

We are often asked if one has to keep up the application of commercial fertilizers when he once begins it, and in answer to this question I will say that a commercial fertilizer is in no sense a stimulant, but is a plain, simple plant food in a somewhat more concentrated form than we are accustomed to thinking of it and that it occurs in the soil. Thus, it is not any more necessary to keep up the use of a commercial fertilizer when one has once begun it than it is to keep up the feeding of a steer corn or a new breed. Commercial fertilizers in themselves have no deleterious effect on the soil whatever. To rely upon commercial fertilizers entirely and to continue to exhaust the land without any rotating of crops and without adding any barnyard manure, will result in a deficiency of humus, or vegetable matter, cannot be supplied by the commercial fertilizer. This condition is not the fault of the commercial fertilizer, but is the fault of the method of using it. H. J. Warren.

Dean of the Agricultural College.
